

POLITICAL SCIENCE 293: POSSIBLE POLITICAL SYSTEMS

This course offers a dose of visionary political thinking as an antidote for the pervasive political pessimism from which we suffer. More specifically, it elaborates a vision of an ideal society characterized by sexual, political and technological liberation. At the same time, it is designed to encourage serious discussion about the possibility of--and thus the obstacles to--the actualization of this ideal. Students will be expected to familiarize themselves with the case for feminism, participatory democracy, and ecology as well as address the arguments that can be and have been made against the desirability and/or possibility of these forms of liberation. Four short (five to seven pages, double-spaced and typed) papers will be required.

It should go without saying that students are expected to come to class having done the required reading and therefore being prepared to ask questions and make comments during lectures and discussions.

The following required readings are available for purchase at Circle Center Bookstore:

Ernest Callenbach, Ecotopia
Robert A. Dahl, After the Revolution

E. Gene Frankland and Donald Schoonmaker, Between Protest and Power,
