

POLITICAL SCIENCE 301
INTERNSHIP PROGRAM
Spring 2012

Course Requirements

Students must work in a government office, civic, community organization, political campaign, international organization, or law office for at least 10 hours a week for 15 weeks.

Within the first two weeks of the course each student is required to have from their supervisor a letter outlining the jobs they will be doing in their internships. The activities must include more than filing or secretarial assistance although these activities may legitimately be part of the internship. The internship must allow the student to attend government meetings, campaign training sessions, community meetings, planning meetings, etc. so that the student gains an overall understanding of the governmental, political, or organizational activities. The letter becomes essentially a "contract" between the student and the "employer". Any student who does not have a placement within the first two weeks will be automatically dropped from the course.

Unless special permission is granted students must attend the class and internship discussion session each Monday from 2:00- 2:50 p.m. in BSB 1115.

Any students who need assistance will be given suggested internship opportunities during the first week and have until the end of the second week to come to a final decision and get their "contract" from the agency they have selected.

My office hours are Monday and Wednesday from 3-5 p.m. or by appointment in BSB 1126C.

Five books will be required for the course. All students will read:

Reeher and Mariani, The Insider's Guide to Political Internships (Westview, 2002)

Simpson, Winning Elections, (Longman: 1996 edition.)

Students must select three books from the following lists according to their internship site or they may substitute others by permission of the instructor. Additional books will be added to the list as internship placement sites are finalized.
